

FAMILY TOOL 01 • THE FAMILY SCREEN RESET • THREE DAYS

Get one moment back together.

Pick one moment that repeats, like dinner, the ride to school, or bedtime. The adults go first, the kids help choose the rules, and you try it for three days. It is an experiment, so nobody gets punished.

THE MOMENT WE WANT BACK

Dinner, the ride to school, bedtime, a game, Saturday morning, or another moment that repeats.

WHAT IS PULLING US AWAY NOW

Name the pattern without blaming one person.

OUR THREE DAY EXPERIMENT

Where will devices live? When does it start and end? What exceptions do we need?

WHO DOES WHAT

The adults model it first. The kids help choose.

FAMILY TOOL 02 • THE WEEKLY TRADITION BUILDER

One small thing worth coming back to.

A tradition gets its meaning from repeating. It can be small and cheap. What matters is that it still happens on a hard week.

WHAT IT PROTECTS

Connection, play, faith, rest, food, movement, service, making things, or something else.

THE SMALLEST VERSION

The activity, day, time, and place, plus the version that still works on a hard week.

EVERYONE GETS A SAY

What will the adults organize? What can the kids or anyone else choose?

THE PLAN

Write it down so it survives the week.

FAMILY TOOL 03 • THE SIDE BY SIDE TEEN CHECK IN

Talk side by side.

Make room for a real conversation without cornering them, interrogating them, or turning the first answer into a lecture. The adult puts the phone away first.

BEGIN BESIDE THEM

Drive, walk, make food, fix something, or sit somewhere neutral.

ONE EASY INVITATION

Want to ride with me? Want to get something to eat? Can you help me with this?

FOUR QUESTIONS WORTH KEEPING

Ask one. Let the silence sit.

WHAT IS TAKING UP YOUR HEADSPACE?

Listen more than you answer.

WHAT ARE ADULTS MISSING?

About your world, right now.

LISTEN, THINK, OR ACT?

Do you want me to listen, help you think, or help?

WHAT WOULD HELP THIS WEEK?

One thing that would make it easier.

WHAT WE AGREED ON

Write only what you both agreed to. Do not add a hidden assignment afterward.
